Restoration and Reactivation of historic buildings and projects for meaningful service

It is a sad fact that many of our cemeteries and churchyards have, due to infrequent use and rising maintenance costs become dilapidated and unfriendly places to visit.

The buildings contained therein usually require extensive work or are closed and boarded up with little or no funds to make good.

Even when dereliction has set in and disuse effective, it is not too late to find solutions and investment to achieve a balance between recommissioning for original function and the provision of new services and facilities to meet the challenges of “today”.

Redundant Churches, Cemetery Chapels and many other interesting and historic buildings can receive a new lease of life by re-defining their role in serving present day needs. Effective facilities can emerge in the service of the community.

The demolition of historic buildings, especially churches is quite commonplace. This tragic reality is almost certainly unnecessary if preemptive thought and action is applied.

Revenue generating schemes can fund restoration and buildings can be saved and made to provide a relevant service, and the environment created will enhance and serve the people of the community.

Reviving disused chapels and other vacant properties within existing local cemeteries and churchyards for the purpose of cremated remains interment creates a viable and valuable asset, not only for the community it serves but also for the burial authority as a long-term revenue stream.

Commemorative tablets can be inscribed in various ways or bronze applied lettering can be used. In this memorial hall tablets are either solid oak, french polished by hand, white marble or tinted glass.

The niches are normally available in two sizes to suit either individual or family requirements and whilst lining is usually standard, customized fitting and lining can be designed and provided by consultation.

All tablets are interchangeable so that the installation management can respond to the requirements of the bereaved or niche grant owners.

welters® have a range of partnership options available including full or part-funded schemes to suit the needs of the client.
